Bridge Web2-To-Web3

A bridge between Web2 and Web3 refers to a technological or financial connection that facilitates the interaction and interoperability between the real world enterprises (Web2) and the decentralized, blockchain-based internet (Web3). Web2 represents the current state of the enterprises infrastructures and business, characterized by centralized platforms and services that rely on servers owned by specific companies to manage and store data as much as being financially bound to fiat. Web3, on the other hand, envisions a more decentralized and user-centric internet and currencies where blockchain technology enable peer-to-peer interactions, digital ownership, and enhanced privacy.
