Bridge Web2-To-Web3

First fintech capable of investing Crypto currencies value in the real economy

A bridge between Web2 and Web3 refers to a technological or financial connection that facilitates the interaction and interoperability between the real world enterprises (Web2) and the decentralized, blockchain-based internet (Web3). Web2 represents the current state of the enterprises infrastructures and business, characterized by centralized platforms and services that rely on servers owned by specific companies to manage and store data as much as being financially bound to fiat. Web3, on the other hand, envisions a more decentralized and user-centric internet and currencies where blockchain technology enable peer-to-peer interactions, digital ownership, and enhanced privacy.

Project- Banqua is a top notch Property management company which organizes a financial product combined with real estate acquisition.

Banqua Stable Coin

The first Stable Coin (BNQ), with Smart Node technology, pegged to Hedera based on USDT 1: 1, in a single suite, used for trading services, Cross-Chain, Staking, Banqua Card and the first in the world for Real Estate in Dubai in Staking mode.

The power of Smart-Node technology QTECH offers a suite of Decentralized Services built on top of the Hedera Network. The team has developed a technology that could potentially replace smart-contracts in the near future: the Smart-Nodes. In a few words, Smart-Nodes are highly customisable programs, deployed inside virtual images which can be hosted and decentralized through local or cloud computing environments. Their purpose is to create a decentralized network of services that could leverage the Hedera Layer-1 functionalities, which are much more efficient and cost-effective compared to Ethereum - based environments.
